

Lodge 80 Window

Written by Administrator - Last Updated Wednesday, 27 January 2010 08:52

There are five circular stained glass windows on the front of Rathfriland Masonic Hall, one of which is shown left. The decorative design includes a Masonic symbol more commonly known as a square and a set of compasses. Together they are the single most identifiable symbol of Freemasonry.

There are five circular stained glass windows on the front of Rathfriland Masonic Hall, one of which is shown left. The decorative design includes a Masonic symbol more commonly known as a square and a set of compasses. Together they are the single most identifiable symbol of Freemasonry.